Pittsburg State University

Pittsburg State University Digital Commons

Biographical

Phillip and Ida Hayman Callery Collection, 1880-1976

4-27-1917

Newspaper article, A Real Socialist, 1917

Follow this and additional works at: https://digitalcommons.pittstate.edu/hayman_biographical

Recommended Citation

"Newspaper article, A Real Socialist, 1917" (1917). Biographical. 8. https://digitalcommons.pittstate.edu/hayman_biographical/8

This Book is brought to you for free and open access by the Phillip and Ida Hayman Callery Collection, 1880-1976 at Pittsburg State University Digital Commons. It has been accepted for inclusion in Biographical by an authorized administrator of Pittsburg State University Digital Commons. For more information, please contact digitalcommons@pittstate.edu.

spared. In agitate us. ve the annot murmer ty that one neipation of aken out of oiced in the loved, the l, the slaves about to se-

Russia that hrown open n and womto cast their f their own, a time when great nation o the world, new courage He has made the rule by nust be dethe rule of established lived to see all the peo-great world mon saying "Christianity is doomed." out of this vast good that we are therhood of

dear friend the last day th suffering l constantly suffering ones and may all the gods help them to bear the affliction of this sad day.

Yours fraternally, THEODORE DEBS.

"A REAL SOCIALIST."

Here is a beautiful and broad-minded tribute to Mrs. Callery, printed in

Wednesday morning's Sun:

"Early Monday morning as a representative of the Sun was coming down to work he noticed a little, old woman standing at the corner of Fourth and Broadway. As he approached she attracted his attention and in broken English asked if he knew when the funeral of Mrs. Ida Callery was to be. He told her it was to be held at 2:30 in the afternoon upon which she replied, 'I thought it was at 10 o'clock this morning.' Later in the day he saw the woman still tramping up and down the streets waiting to show respect and reverence to one she loved. We have no way of knowing just what service Mrs. Callery rendered this old woman. It may have been very trivial but it must have penetrated close to the heart. At any rate it is indicative of the personality of the departed one. She delighted in being courteous and rendering service to those less fortunate than herself. To her the woman clad in calico had a greater appeal than one clad in silk and fur. She was a Socialist because she believed that party held more hope for those struggling in poverty and ignorance. She embraced Socialism because she believed in its tenets, not because she desired to use it as a stepping stone to wealth or official prominence. Men prominent in So-