The Inciting Incident

In ENGL 875 Seminar: Writing for the Web, Dr. Patterson approached us with concerns from the program regarding the accessibility and usability of the English Program's website. These concerns stemmed from the abundance of people responsible for curating content on the webpage. To help standardize the content, we began our project by identifying the webpage's target audiences.

New MA Emphasis in Professional Writing with "Jump Start" Option

The new MA in English with an Emphasis in Professional Writing will begin in the fall of 2017. The program features classes in writing for the public, such as grant writing; writing for electronic environments, such as digital literacies and new media writing; writing for publication, such as editing and document design; and theories of writing. This degree will help you develop the flexibility necessary for a wide variety of writing occupations.

The MA in English with an Emphasis in Professional Writing also features the "Jump Start" option. In this option, Pittsburg State juniors and seniors who meet certain eligibility guidelines may take up to three additional courses that will count toward the MA Emphasis in Professional Writing. The

Student and Faculty Activities

Faculty and students in the PSU English Program participate in a range of program activities outside the classroom.

The Distinguished Visiting Writers Series brings prominent writers to our campus for readings, class discussions, and conversation. Each year the winner of the Victor J. Emmett Memorial Prize is invited to campus to receive the prize and present a scholarly lecture. Our students write, edit, and produce Cow Creek Review, the student literary journal that showcases our students' fiction, creative non-fiction, and poetry. The program also sponsors Sigma Tau Delta English Honors Society.

Undergraduate Programs

Undergraduate students who pursue a Bachelor of Arts in English have an array of degree program options. In addition to a Traditional Emphasis in Literature, we offer undergraduate emphases in Creative Writing in Poetry or Fiction, Professional Writing, and Language. Students interested in a teaching career can pursue a Bachelor of Science in Education.

Undergraduate students who are minoring in English have similar options. We offer minors in the Traditional Emphasis in Literature, Creative Writing, Professional Writing, Teaching, and Film and Media Studies.

For a complete description of English course offerings and a detailed listing of required courses for each emphasis, see the English Program Guides and the English section in the PSU Catalog.

Earlier University Catalogs may be found on the Registrar Catalog page. After locating and clicking on the catalog link, scroll down to the College of Arts and Sciences section. From there, select the Department of English.

Master of Arts Emphases

The English faculty at Pittsburg State strongly believe that the study of literature, language, and writing can be, at the same time, both intellectually fulfilling and highly practical.

Our master's degree program is designed to be completed in two years. For regulations pertaining to all candidates for master degrees at Pittsburg State, see The Graduate School section in the PSU University Catalog. For class requirements for specific emphases go here.

For other information about our graduate degree programs, including the required preliminary and comprehensive examinations, you may e-mail the Director of English Graduate Studies, Dr. Paul McCallum.

- Creative Writing Emphasis

This new emphasis offers small classes in poetry and fiction writing with personal attention from faculty. Students in this emphasis are artists committed to the craft of writing. They may also be preparing for further graduate study, or working toward careers in teaching at the college or community college level or any of numerous other career opportunities for those skilled in writing. Students are afforded practical opportunities to work on publishing a literary journal and to help organize our Distinguished Visiting Writer's Series.

- Literature Emphasis

Newly revised, our Literature emphasis continues our traditionally strong commitment to literary studies. Students selecting this emphasis may be preparing for doctoral studies in English or for professional degree programs in business or law. High school teachers, on the other hand, may select this emphasis to update their teaching credentials. Several of our recent graduates have gone on to doctoral study in English at more than a half dozen of the leading state universities in the Great Plains region.

Earlier University Catalogs may be found on the Registrar Catalog page. After locating and clicking on the catalog link, scroll down to the College of Arts and Sciences section. From there, select the Department of English.

Writing the Style Guide

Excerpt from the Style Guide

- Capitalize names of programs
- Use standard numerals (spell out 1-10 and numerals for 10+)
- Use “our” instead of Pittsburg State University as an adjective
- Use Sigma Tau Delta instead of STD
- Use Cow Creek Review on first use and then Cow Creek
- Use directive commands for links
- Use “group” pronouns (we, our, us)
- Limit paragraphs to 3 or 4 sentences

Undergraduate Majors

Bachelor of Science in Education

Students interested in a teaching career can pursue a Bachelor of Science degree in Education with a major in English.

Our courses encompass a wide variety of English-related skills which can be passed on in our graduates' classrooms. Students who graduate from our BSeD program will have attained extensive knowledge in both British and American literature, the workings of the English language, and writing and composition.

Creative Writing

Students in our Creative Writing program will focus on honing their abilities in the areas of fiction or poetry, readying them for a career in the publishing industry, or preparing them to pursue their studies further in our Creative Writing master's program.

Students who pursue the poetry emphasis will pair their core requirements with classes dedicated to crafting poetry, as well as analyzing and bettering their own works and the works of their classmates. Those opting for our fiction emphasis will experience the same processes in their own classes.

Language

Students who pursue a degree in our Language emphasis will attain an in-depth understanding of the English language, preparing them for teaching roles in both American classrooms and classrooms abroad.

Classes in this curriculum place a focus on linguistics and literature. Students will take courses in both American and British literature, as well as linguistics, composition, and history of the English language, among others. A minor in ESOL is strongly recommended with this emphasis.
