Dear Anabel:

Thanks for the clipping, It's clever and I think they are going to use parts in The Guardian.

The money order was also appreciated and we're glad you like The Guardian so well.

And at this late day thanks also for Susan's Easter bunny. The truth is I wrote you a note of thanks at the time but in her eagerness to unwrap the package Susan tore off part of the address and the letter was returned. She thought the rabbit was awfully cute and likes getting things on her own. I was tickled, of course, that you thought of her.

We think Susan's speech difficulty is straightening out, thanks to the teacher we were so fortunate in finding. Don't you think this number work is pretty good? She is through her primer, reads like a top and writes real well. So when she enters public school she will certainly not be behind children of her age.

We have been as busy as could be, but manage to keep well.

I hope things are well with you and your new hubby. Love to you both and also to Phil and Jim when you see them and come to see us when you can.

Fredo
