Presenting the
PSU New Music Ensemble

Reena Berger, piano
Joanne Britz, clarinet
Steven Elisha, cello
Selim Giray, violin
Brian Woods, tenor

John C. Ross, conductor

Waltz (1991)

John C. Ross (b. 1962)

special guests
Paul Carlson, violin
Susan Marchant, piano

Sonata for Cello and Piano (1915)

Claude Debussy (1862-1918)

Prologue
Sérénade et Final

A reading of Tony Hoagland’s “The Word”
by Rebekah Grieb

John C. Ross

A reading of William Shakespeare’s Sonnet 97
by Rebekah Grieb

Sonnet 97 (2003)

John C. Ross

Final Passage (2003)

John C. Ross
The Word

Down near the bottom of the crossed-out list
of things you have to do today,

between “green thread”
and “broccoli,” you find that you have penciled “sunlight.”

Resting on the page, the word is beautiful. It touches you as if you had a friend and sunlight were a present he had sent from someplace distant as this morning—to cheer you up, and to remind you that,

among your duties, pleasure is a thing

that also needs accomplishing.
Do you remember?
that time and light are kinds of love, and love

is no less practical than a coffee grinder

or a safe spare tire?
Tomorrow you may be utterly without a clue,

but today you get a telegram
from the heart in exile, proclaiming that the kingdom

still exists,
the king and queen alive,
still speaking to their children,

--to any one among them
who can find the time to sit out in the sun and listen.

Tony Hoagland. SWEET RUIN. ©1993.
Reprinted by permission of The University of Wisconsin Press.
William Shakespeare

That leaves look pale, dreading the winter's near;
Or, if they shine, it's with so dull a cheer;
And thou away the very buds are mute:
For summer and his pleasure wait on thee;
But hope of orphans and unlaughed fruit;
Yet this abundant issue seem'd to me
Like widow'd wombs after their Lord's decease:
Bearing the warton burden of the prime,
The lowing autumn, rich with pig increase,
And yet this time removed was summer's time;
What old December's barreness, everywher;
What freezing have I felt, what dark days scent
From thee, the pleasure of the heaving year;
How like a winter hath my absence been

Sonnet 97
About the
PSU New Music Ensemble

One frustration that both composers and performers sometimes share is the phenomenon of the single performance. After working on a concert of music for weeks or months, investing numerous hours in rehearsal, the concert comes . . . and goes. There is one chance to present the music to the public and then it’s on to the next thing. Well, if the music is worth presenting, then it’s worth presenting again, perhaps to a different audience. Therefore, the purpose of this ensemble is two-fold. First, it is a vehicle for chamber music performance among the music department faculty, in which colleagues can experience multiple performances of the same music, growing together as an ensemble while growing into the music. The ensemble’s second purpose is to go out on short performance tours, both in-state and out-of-state whose mission is to spread the word about the PSU Music Department and to recruit talented high school students to study at PSU.

The music that the ensemble plays will be a mixture of new music—some of it composed by me—and classic chamber pieces. The PSU New Music Ensemble will be a platform for showing off the music department’s performance and composition faculty.

Tonight’s concert is our first. Next year there will be others in the area. Although currently a work-in-progress, it is my hope that we will become a fixture in the musical landscape of Southeast Kansas and beyond.

John C. Ross

Special thanks to PSU theatre student Rebekah Grieb for tonight’s readings, and to Professor Emeritus Dr. Paul Carlson and Dr. Susan Marchant for their goodwill and for simply helping out.